Want some publicity for your research???

Do you want to know how to get good publicity for your research? At this year's ASM we will be having a fascinating hands on workshop on how to publicise your research, what to do when a journalist wants to talk to you, and how to understand and manage the process presented by Louisa Wright.

Louisa Wright is a long-time journalist and editor with experience in newspapers, magazines and radio. A past publications editor for UNSW, she is now the manager of research communication at the National Centre in HIV Epidemiology and Clinical Research. She has extensive experience in translating science, medicine and engineering into English.
